YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

An exceedingly common trouble which still gives the medical profession a great deal of concern is ordinary nose bleed.

This usually is due to some damage to the small blood vessel in the septum. Indeed, 90 per cent of all nose bleeds are said to come from the blood vessels in the front part of the septum or membrane between the two nostrils.

A physician who can locate the bleeding point can stop the bleeding promptly by applying pressure directly to the point at which it occurs.

If, as occasionally happens, the bleeding is in the back part of the nose, on what is called the floor, it is difficult to locate and also difficult to treat and control. It has been found that the application of cold irrigations or solutions is helpful in stopping such nose bleeds.

In event of extraordinary bleeding, due to such conditions as hemophilia or puerpura—two cases in which the tissues tend to bleed profusely because of a lack of certain elements in the blood—the doctor occasionally can obtain success in stopping the bleeding by injecting into the patient some of his own blood or the blood of some other person.

In the state called puerpura, when the bleeding becomes absolutely intractable, it is known that removal of the spleen will bring about an almost immediate stopping of the hemorrhage. However, removal of the spleen itself is rather a serious operation, and is not undertaken except in extraordinary cases.

Because some patients bleed severely after removal of tonsils or adenoids, the modern surgeon who specializes in this condition has everything arranged to control the bleeding should it occur.

There are solutions which can be applied directly to the points which bleed. There are substances like epinephrine and ephedrine which constrict blood vessels and control hemorrhage. Finally, there is the possibility of sewing the tissues over the bleeding point and tying the knot sufficiently tight to prevent hemorrhage.

Your Children

It is utterly amazing how ignorant many people are about the names and identities of flowers. Not so long ago I talked to a gardener, who of all persons on earth should know the names of the blooms he raised, but failed miserably. Right on his own premises was the largest hyacinth I have ever seen, but none, and yet he did not know what it was.

Another time I admired the posy bed of a neighbor who had owned the property for years. I spoke of the portulaca, the marguerites and the galaria. Said she, "I don't know the names of any of them. Tony attends to things and I never bother about what flowers are called."

Names Come Easier to Child After all, we may say, Shakespeare or somebody wrote that a rose by any other name would smell as sweet. That is true, but in some vague way we always appreciate anything more if we can identify it by its name. I can as easily conceive of people going about without names as flowers. Or countries and towns being known as the "one with rivers" or "the city with red houses."

Everyone remembers names better when he learns them as a child. Later it becomes almost impossible to fix appellations in mind. Name of birds, animals and trees, as well as flowers. I consider more important even than dates of battles or administrations, because there is scarcely a day in which we do not meet up with them in art, if not in nature.

We think that youngsters absorb flower names just from general hearsay, or from seeing them decorating our tables. Not so. They have to have their attention called to identification marks, to leaves, color and size.

Familiarity Breeds Interest Appreciation is accented by intimacy. When we know anything or anyone well enough to name it, we like it, or them, better. And so it is a good time right now to show the children what certain blooms are called. Summer is passing. After that, books will have to be our guides.

It is harder by far to stir up real enthusiasm for horticulture from plates no matter how colorful, so let's go out and take Johnny with us. "This is verbena. Here is a columbine. That is bergamot. Over there is the lovely phlox. Zinnias, nasturtiums, cornflower, bachelor-buttons, Sweet William, hydrangia, poppies. There isn't room for even the commonest varieties. But even these few will add considerably to Johnny's education and enjoyment."

the stand, most of whom had waited there for hours. They appeared sane, any many looked quite prosperous. Two spinsterish ladies behind me were knitting and gossiping of Hollywood love affairs.

Each to His Own Star I sat between a fat man and a little girl. She had a large bag of potato chips and offered me some. I asked if that was her dinner.

She said, "Yes, only I had a ham sandwich, but I ate that because I have been here since 4 o'clock. I came to see Shirley Temple."

"She isn't here," said the fat man. "He keeps saying that," whispered the little girl. "She's coming, isn't she?"

"I don't know. But Freddie March is coming. So's Clark Gable."

"I don't care," said the little girl. "What, No Autograph?"

A boy of about 15 tapped me on the shoulder and asked, "Say, now many Gable autographs you got?" I admitted I had none. Everyone within hearing looked at me in surprise.

Somewhere in the room a woman with a nasal voice was telling her husband she just knew he'd left the sprinkler turned on in the back yard. He said he hadn't; she said he had; he said damn it, he hadn't wanted to come here, anyway.

In front of me were two very young men who had a flask. They tipped the flask rather ostentatiously and one of them said this was kinda like a foot-ball game. The other said yeah, only they got no cheer leaders or hot dog salesmen.

"Next year," said the first, they'll have yell leaders and hot dogs. Just lookit those cops getting pushed around."

Too Much for Cops The cops were getting pushed around. Stars were arriving rapidly and the crowd was surging over and under the steel cables, to get at them for autographs, or to snatch a flower from a corsage or maybe just to touch them.

A man and woman were led to the microphone. This is Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hornblow, and the announcement, "Say a few words, Miss—ah—Miss—"
"Loy," prompted the star. "Myrna Loy." She said a few words.
And now, Mr.—ah—
"Mr. Loy," said Mr. Hornblow, grinning. He said a few words.
Only Half the Show
Almost everybody came—Dick Powell and Joan Blondell, Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, Marion Davies, Jean Harlow, William Powell—a big name every few seconds.
No Shirley Temple, though. Spectators cheered and applauded.
Pretty soon the ushers began to close the theater doors. I rose to leave the stand, but the little girl didn't know I had a ticket to the show. She asked, "Aren't you going to wait?"
"For what?"
"For the stars to leave. Everybody waits for the stars to leave. It'll be only about three hours."

Labor Party May Organize by 1940

Supporting Roosevelt in 1936, But Is Free 4 Years From Now

By PRESTON GROVER
Associated Press Correspondent
WASHINGTON — Political figures and grandstand observers consider it almost a certainty that labor will attempt to put a political party in the field by 1940.

So widely is the idea accepted that some are looking for a quiet drive on state legislatures beginning this winter to ease the way for third party movements. The long dominance of the two major parties has made political life somewhat of a closed corporation in many states.

Merely a declaration that "we want to put a party in the field" is not enough. Some states require long petitions representing a certain percentage of the vote as a means of party entry. Often a certain proportion of the signers must come from every county, or at least every congressional district. And there are other hurdles.

Bury Cold Nucleus
Labor's non-partisan league headed by George L. Berry, one of President Roosevelt's New Deal administrators, is looked upon in many quarters as the nucleus of such a party. The league, as well as John L. Lewis' United Mine workers, this year is supporting President Roosevelt, but without any commitments beyond 1936.

Some suggest the labor movement may attempt to take over the Democratic party but such a proposition calls up the difficulty of merging the viewpoint, say, of John L. Lewis and such figures as Senator Glass of Virginia, Senator Teddings of Maryland, Secretary of State Hull, and Owen D. Young.

More likely to most political eyes appears an attempt to consolidate the labor vote into a third party with enough strength and permanency to put a new division in the house and senate more sharply defined than the present progressives or farmers-labor members who usually sit with one or the other of the major parties.

Rich and Reckless

BEGIN HERE TODAY
MOLLY MILFORD, rich and popular, has received proposals of marriage from three suitors, but BRENT STREIGHT, whom she loves, has not asked her to marry him.
Ridiculed with a succession of warts, all alike, Molly asks Brent to take her to "The Red Poppy," a questionable night club. He refuses. Molly, answered, goes with another admirer, WICK ROSS.

"Silly name, isn't it?" Molly laughed a little uncertainly.
"No," the stranger replied.
"I don't agree," Molly told him.
"It's ridiculous. You're right, though, about this place being stupid. I came here because I was told it was dangerous and exciting. I don't know what I expected. Perhaps that people would be throwing things at each other. Or the police would come in and round everybody else up but me!"

"What a nice, safe feeling." His voice mocked a little. "You could never imagine the police looking for you."

"No, could you?"
"Not yet. But we never know what our impulses might lead to." "I've decided it may be better not to know."

"Nothing ever happens at Frenchy's—this place I'm talking about."

"Where do you work?" Molly queried.
"In a bank."

So he was just a nice young man who worked in a bank and was dreadfully romantic about her.

"If," the young man was saying in a soft, urgent tone, "I had gone to Harvard or Yale or Princeton you'd have gone out with me. But I only attended the University of the World and was left out of the Social Register."

"That doesn't matter to me." "You mean it?"

BEFORE Molly could answer, there was Brent. A most determined Brent, cutting in with a vehemence that swept her into his arms like a resistless tide.

His voice was like ice. "What do you mean, dancing with strange men, you crazy little idiot?"

"Please don't talk to me as though I were still in kindergarten," Molly said. "And what right have you to assume—?"

"Don't pretend with me. I saw your face when the lights went on. I suppose this is a regular feature of the place, giving some of the patrons a chance to meet upper class in a democratic sort of way."

"You sound like a snob," Molly replied. "And I hate snobs. I don't know why I ever imagine I am fond of you."

"Then you do imagine it sometimes, Molly?" He had pulled her closer in his arms.

"Not when you talk like this." "Well, whether you like me or not, you're not going to see that fellow again."

"Who'd go to prevent me, if I choose?" Molly's voice held a dangerous note.
"If I thought he'd dare to follow up and ask for a date, I'd wipe up the floor with him."

"You've no right to order me around."

"I have a right." There was a strange new note in Brent's voice. Molly's heart fluttered at the sound.

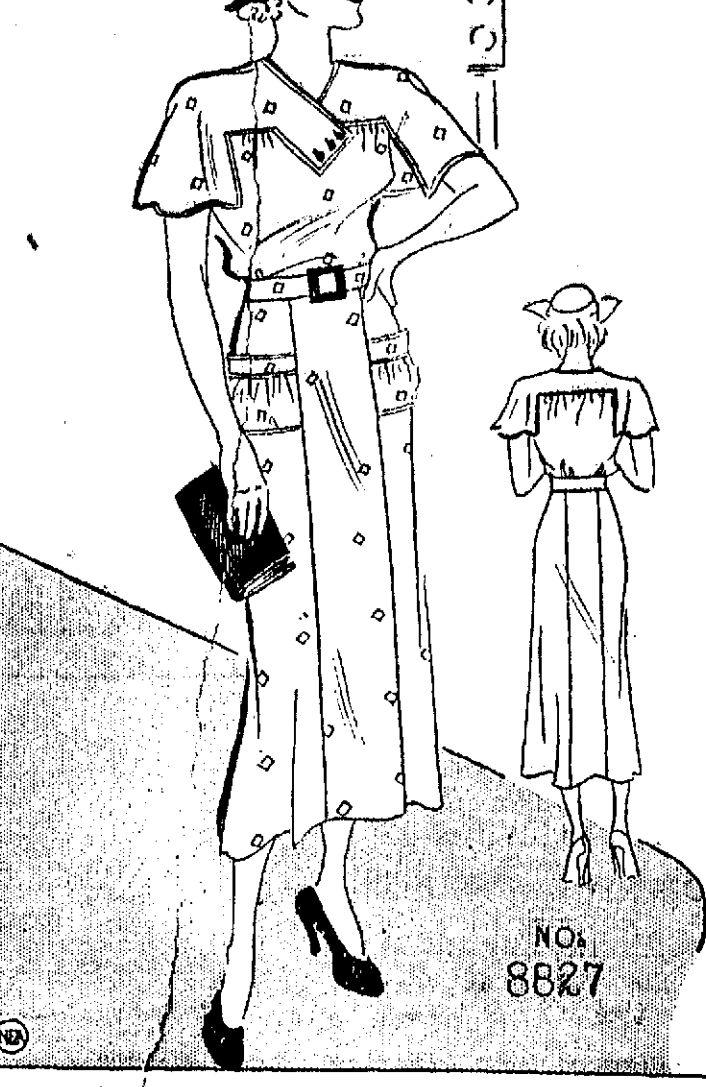

"What right—?"
"The right of a friend who isn't going to let you make a fool of yourself." Brent said slowly, after a moment of hesitation.

"Oh!" So that was all. Molly said furiously, "I don't like being told what not to do."

It hadn't occurred to her before. But now she was certain that if Sam Smith—or whatever his name was—invited her to have dinner with him she probably would go.

To have two "aisles" through the legislative chambers to separate Republicans, Democrats and a third party would present a picture strange to American eyes although familiar enough in European governments.

Coalition Like Etrope?
Just what would happen if a third party obtained a "balance of power" in congress? How would a president from the ranks of one of the older parties deal with this new situation? Would there be a real "coalition" cabinet in the sense of European coalitions sometimes made necessary to keep a ministry in power? What bids, what concessions, would such a president have to make to retain support of the third power? For he would perhaps need that support to get his own program through, or even the necessary appropriation bills.

A sample of what might develop is indicated in the manner by which President Roosevelt has won support of Senator Morris, Nebraska Republican, and Senator La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive.

The situation no doubt will be keenly watched through many political knot-holes during the coming four years.

A Prayer for the Week-End Motorist

Grant me a steady hand and watchful eye.
That no man shall be hurt when I pass by.
Thou gavest life, and I pray no act of mine
May take away or mar that gift of thine.
Shelter those dear Lord, who hear me
From the evils of fire and all calamity.
Teach me to use my car for others' need.
Not miss through love of speed
The beauties of the world; that thus I may
With joy and courtesy go my way.
—Selected.

Bob Burns, Crosby in Musical Film

"Rhythm on the Range" Opening on Local Screen Sunday

Two radio headliners, Bing Crosby and Bob Burns, have leading roles in the newest of the Crosby musicals, "Rhythm on the Range," scheduled to open Sunday at the Sanger. The picture features Frances Farmer in the feminine lead, and boasts a cast headed by such outstanding players as Samuel S. Hinds, Warren Hyter, Lucille Webster Gleason and George E. Stone. It also introduces for the first time to screen audiences Martha Raye, dynamic stage comedienne who boasts an acrobatic face and a rapid-fire line of near-insanity.

"Rhythm on the Range" launches six song hits, all of them currently heard on the radio and in dance halls everywhere. They include "I Can't Escape From You," "The House That Jack Built For Jill," "If You Can't Sing It You'll Have to Swing It," "Empty Saddles," "I'm An Old Cow Hand From the Rio Grande" and "Roundup Lullaby."

Crosby and Burns are cowboys in the picture, which opens with the pair appearing in a Madison Square Garden radio spot. The story's plot revolves around their return trip to Arizona. Crosby rides in a bar car with a peppy Hereford bull he has purchased—and a stowaway, Miss Farmer, who is a society girl fleeing from an undesired marriage. Burns rides in a passenger car—and has the erratic Miss Raye as traveling companion.

Bailey Is Elected

had been considered safe. Another precedent shattered to smithereens by the victor is that the justices of the Supreme Court must be learned in politics as well as in the law.

Not a Politician. Griffin Smith is no politician. As state comptroller he has gone after malfeasants, high and low and has incurred the bitter enmity of powerful political bosses. They made their influence felt in the election and it was noticeable that all the machine-rules counties gave lopsided majorities against him.

But he won, anyway. Adding to the odds against him was the fact that Chief Justice Johnson is the close personal and political friend of Governor Futrell. He has been credited with having more influence with the present governor than any other individual. As was to be expected the entire weight of the powerful state administration was thrown against Smith but he overcame that obstacle, too.

He took the lead in the first returns Tuesday night and never relinquished it. Whenever he had acquired a comfortable lead, the vote of a "machine county" would come in and cut it to a few hundred.

But the battling ex-editor stayed out in front all the way.

Little Change for Governor's Race. In the governor's race, the official returns made but little change from the result announced Friday.

With official returns from all but four counties and with the votes in those four complete, Attorney General Carl E. Bailey had a plurality of 2,430 over Secretary of State Ed F. McDonald.

The figures: Bailey 75,760; McDonald 72,330; R. A. Cook 61,065; Tom Terral 24,763; Howard Reed 4,610.

In Mississippi County. Bailey followers became somewhat perturbed and McDonald adherents became hopeful when the news came from Mississippi county that the County Committee had lopped off more than 500 from the total credited to Bailey in the unofficial returns. The committee reported that the tally sheets and the totals of two boxes, for Wilson and Victoria townships, revealed an exact reversal of the unofficial count. Only the vote in the governor's race from the two boxes was discarded.

Major Operation on Public Morals

Rev. Mr. Couch to Discuss Dancing, Bathing and Cards Sunday

Does the Bible say a person who is guilty of dancing can not inherit the kingdom of heaven? Where, and how did the modern dance originate? What is the origin of card-playing? What is the history of the modern bathing suit? (What is its future?) What are the evils of the modern dance? What are the dangers of the modern dance?

The above and other questions will be discussed Rev. Bill Couch Sunday night at the tent revival at Fifth and Elm streets.

When people feel bad they usually take a tonic. When they are sick they take medicine. When they become critically ill they most frequently have an operation. Hence the operation at the tent Sunday night. This will be a three in one triple operation. Operations are also usually spoken of as major or minor. This will be major operation, according to the Rev. Mr. Couch. Services Saturday night at 8 o'clock.

The Trade-Mark of Your Protection

Whenever you see this trademark on any Ford replacement part that you buy you can rest assured that it is the Genuine Ford Part.

Ford has been putting this trademark on his parts since his entry into the automobile manufacturing field... for your protection.

The GENUINE Costs LESS After All

The "just as good" replacement you can buy at any of the so-called automobile supply dealers may be just a shade cheaper but when you consider the materials used in the manufacture of that part... then you see the difference.

Insist on the Genuine. It will save you money and time and trouble in the end.

A Complete Check-Up of Your Car

When you've gotten back home from your vacation be sure to drive in and let our expert mechanics check your car for any defects. Perhaps your car is loose after so much driving and needs a thorough "going over."

In any case, your car may need some minor changes to get ready for the fall and winter months yet to come.

You will find our mechanics thoroughly trained, prompt and courteous.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

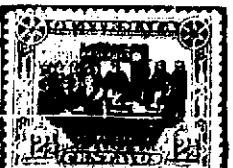

REVOLT AGAINST IGNORANCE

FOR 300 years, up to the beginning of the 19th century, Guatemala was kept in ignorance, under oppression. Ruled by Spanish governors, the native Creoles heard nothing of the revolutions in France, the United States, and South America.

But gradually news of freedom gained in other Spanish dependencies seeped into Guatemala, and the people became restless. They were appeased first by promises that weren't kept, then by offers of amnesty to political rebels. Still the Guatemalans grew bold. In 1811, a small force revolted in San Salvador, the capital. But all other cities remained loyal to Spain and the revolt was suppressed. Other attempts were quelled, and many insurgents were sentenced to death. But fear of further revolt kept the governor from executing the rebels.

The tide of revolt, by that time, became overpowering, and even the new governor, Gavino Gainza, went over to the independents. In 1821, he called a meeting of citizens in Guatemala City, where resulted the "Act of Independence," in a scene shown on a stamp issued by Guatemala in 1907.
